

Activism & Committees

Committee Market 15th of March

Committee market

ConceptT organises a committee market (with FREE LUNCH) on Tuesday the 15th of March. The different committees that will present themselves at the market will be introduced to you briefly in this booklet.

What is a committee?

ConceptT aims to offer a wide range of activities for their members, but in order to organise these activities, motivated people are needed, together grouped in committees and supported by the board. The table on the right gives an overview of all the committees that ConceptT offers. They are labelled per target group and the type of committee, in case you are wondering: a project committee is a committee with one general start moment and a concrete finishing moment, whereas a continuous committee never 'stops'.

Activism

You can become an active member of ConceptT by participating in a committee. Being active is fun and interesting. You get to know a lot of different people and you will organise activities you have never organised before. By being active you also develop many different skills that you can't learn from your study books. These skills are for example leadership, self management, being assertive and decisive. Activism is also a great addition to your resume. The work field shows that active students are more desired during the job application process.

Time & Costs

Being active and studying can easily be combined. Committees meet once a week during the lunch break. In addition to these meetings a couple of things will have to be taken care of. On the next page, an overview of committees and the corresponding time investment is given.

Costs of participating in a committee is limited to the participation costs of the activities themselves. As a member of a committee you are expected to be present at your own activities. Committee outings are sponsored, while brainstorm moments have to be paid by the committee members. All other costs made for the committee can be claimed from ConceptT. So there are no extra costs in joining a committee!
